

Mr. Farbod Lotfi (1963)

Farbod Lotfi is Chief Executive Officer of Deutsche Bank Rt. since March of 2000. Deutsche Bank is a prime financial institution serving the top Hungarian corporate and financial institutions maintaining a most profitable presence onshore.

Before joining Deutsche Bank he served as the Group Chief Financial Officer for two years at Cofinec N.V., then the largest Central Eastern European consumer packaging group. Cofinec went through serious financial and Management troubles leading it into a severe depreciation of the share price on the stock markets until it finally was sold to industrial investors, Farbod was an instrumental team member in the process of this restructuring process.

Between 1994 and 1998 he was the Managing Director of ING Barings where he performed as Head of Investment Banking and Capital Markets, and led a number of capital market transactions.

He also headed the Capital Markets of GiroCredit in Budapest between 1993 and 1994.

In an earlier stage of his business career he was the 2nd Managing Director of the Budapest Stock Exchange between 1992 and 1993.

He holds a Master degree from the University of Debrecen.

In the course of his career, he participated in number of executive education programs with: USA SEC, Washington DC, European Business School, Stanford Graduate School of Business, University of Economics of Budapest.

Farbod has a unique insight of managing business in Central- and Eastern-Europe, he has hands-on management skills as well as industrial knowledge. During his career in Central- and Eastern-Europe he has performed in highly competitive and success driven organisations.