

Ashoka Mody has been at the International Monetary Fund since 2001 and he is currently an Assistant Director in the European Department. From 1987 to 2001 he worked at the World Bank in various capacities, including leading the writing and production of the Global Development Finance report. He has also been a staff member of AT&T's Bell Laboratories, a visiting professor at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, and a research associate at the Centre for Development Studies, Trivandrum. His policy and academic writings cover a broad range of topics in economic development and international finance.