

Sebastian Weber

Deputy Chief

European Department
International Monetary Fund

\(IMF webpage\)

Sebastian Weber is a Deputy Chief in the European Department of the International Monetary Fund. His main responsibilities relate to the analytical work agenda of the Department and the bi-annual Regional Economic Outlook for Europe. He has previously held positions at the Monetary and Capital Markets, the African and the Research Department at the IMF. He has also worked at the European Central Bank and has been a consultant for the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and the World Bank.

Sebastian holds a PhD and a Masters in International Economics from the Graduate Institute in Geneva and has studied Politics and Economics at the University of Cape Town and the University of Hamburg, where he obtained a B.Sc. (Hons.) in Economics. His research interests include monetary policy, international macro and finance, development, and labor economics. He has published in refereed journals and co-authored several policy papers at the IMF.