

Stephan Danninger

Assistant Director

European Department
International Monetary Fund

\(IMF webpage\)

Stephan Danninger is Assistant Director in the IMF's European Department. He joined the IMF in 2000 and currently heads the regional unit covering the economic outlook for Europe. Previously, he was Director of the IMF Singapore Regional Institute, led the North America and Japan division, and was a researcher in the IMF's World Economic Studies Division which is responsible for the publication of the World Economic Outlook . His research covers a variety of topics, including productivity growth, labor market issues, determinants of countries' export competitiveness, cross-country spillovers of financial stress, and growth enhancing structural reforms. He holds a PhD from Columbia University, New York.